*ANTRA PANDIT¹ & PRITHIVI RAJ²

Competition law is burdened with the responsibility of protecting consumers as well as rival competitors from the ill effects of abuse of dominance enjoyed by a firm, while simultaneously ensuring that those enterprises enjoying dominance in a particular market are not dissuaded from competitively reducing prices due to the stringent law applicable in these cases. Competition Law is therefore an important institutional pillar for a thriving market economy as competitive pressures hone production efficiency and stimulate product and process innovation fundamental to competitiveness and economic growth. This paper analyses every aspect of Dominant position in Competition Law.
